CEO DR. DUANE RANDLEMAN RECENTLY FEATURED ON FOX NEWS LIVE DESK TO DISCUSS HEALTH CARE REFORM

August 24, 2009, Birmingham, Alabama - Birmingham doctor, Duane Randleman and CEO of Best Vein Care recently appeared on Fox News Live Desk TV show to discuss the Health Care Reform Bill.

Dr. Randleman, a cardiovascular, thoracic and vein surgeon practicing since 1991, believes that the focus of reform must be quality-driven to succeed and must involve participation from both the public and private sector. Physicians and other health care providers must pursue continual quality improvement and be available to deliver health care. "As physicians, we must standardize quality of care and best practices, which has shown to reduce overall health costs. The industry must provide products at a reasonable cost to meet the health care needs of the patient and provider. Every one must share in the responsibility of reform and not one particular sector" says Randleman.

In 2003, he established Varicosity Vein Center dedicated to the treatment of all venous disorders, including, most commonly, varicose and spider veins. Since that time the increasing patient demand for Varicosity's exceptional services paved the way to his launch of Best Vein Care (www.bestveincare.com), a company with a mission to establish and elevate quality standards in the delivery of vein care and to build a bridge connecting patients to the top vein care specialists and top vein care centers throughout the United States.
